Deferred Articles.

From the Harrisburgh Chronicle.

The election of State Treasurer by the Senators and Representatives of this state, took place in the Representative chamber on Tuesday the 8th inst. As we predicted on Monday, Mr. Clark was elected. Our prescience, however, did not extend to the number of ballotings that would take place before a choice was made; and it was well that we did not pretend to it, for we had no notion that the battle would have been so stoutly contested. The friends of Mr. Holgate and Mr. Crain, clung to their candidates with great resolution until an unfortunate motion of Mr. Markley to adjourn until three o'clock, and an observation of Mr. Todd that it was the usual hour of adjourning to dinner, gave occasion for a remark by major Cochran, plainly intimating, that the gentlemen on the same side of the question with him, were determined neither to eat nor drink until an election was effected, altered entirely the face of affairs. The friends of Messrs. Holgate and Crain were from that moment discovered to waver, and gave way by degrees, until Mr. Clark was fairly triumphant.

It is but justice to say that the friends of Mr. Trevor, supported him well to the last.

As it is our intention to pay some attention to the lust of power and office that prevails in this state and in the United States, on another occasion, we shall conclude with the remark that the charge of office hunting, or speculating upon office, so freely bestowed upon the independent republicans for the last six years, may now with great propriety be retorted upon the opposition. The following exhibits the different ballotings.

AN ENEMY'S COURTESY.

When the Crusaders under King Richard of England defeated the Saracens the Sultan seeing his troops fly, asked what was the number of the Christians making all this slaughter? He was told that it was only King Richard and his men, and that they were all on foot. 'Then' said the Sultan, 'God forbid that such a noble fellow as King Richard should march on foot,' and sent him a noble charger. The messenger took it, and said, 'Sire the Sultan sends you this charger that you may not be on foot.' The king was as cunning as his enemy, and ordered one of his squires to mount the horse in order to try him. The squire obeyed; but the animal proved fiery, and the squire being unable to hold him in, he set off at full speed to the Sultan's pavilion. The Sultan expected he had got King Richard, and was not a little mortified to find his mistake.

Alliterations.—The admirers of alliteration will be pleased with the following character of a young lady, from an old Newcastle Journal: —"Died, in the flower of her age, Miss Mary Harrison, daughter of the late Mr. Harrison, of Welldow Bridge House. If boundless benevolence be the basis of beatitude, and harmless humility the harbinger of a hallowed heart, these Christian concomitants composed her characteristic, and conciliated the esteem of her contemporary acquaintances, who meant to model their manners by the mould of their meritorious monitor."—There are but two instances, at least in our present recollection, which approach near to the above; the one is, Henry Hallam, hatter, hosier, and haber dasher, at Holborn-bridge, Hatton-garden; the other, "Benjamin Bell, brown bread and biscuit-baker, near Battersea-bridge." There is another on Cardinal Wolsey, better than either:

"Begot by butchers, but by bishops bred.

At a small village in the neighbourhood of Blackburn, is written over the door the following inscription:—'HOLLAND, surgeon, carpenter, man-midwife, and school-master; likewise fine pens, and teeth drawn by the maker, also a curious assortment of Blacken Balls.'

A curious phenomenon now stands on the road-side to Brighton, on the estate of Mr. Seywell; it is a very large tree, half of which is oak, the other half beech.

Crow your t's although you spell wrong.—Capt.——, of the schr ——, while at one of the West India Islands, received the following order, among others, from his owner: "I want you to get me too Monkeys for a particular purpose—Dont fail." In consequence of the word being misspelled, and the t not being crossed, the captain put himself to a great expense and considerably prolonged his voyage to accomplish the order in the sense he gave it. "Where have you been so long?" said the anxious owner on his return. "Looking for your ——monkeys," said the enraged captain, 'and with all my pains I have been able to get but sixty out of the 100.' 'sixty Monkeys!' exclaimed the owner, 'why, I only wanted two.' 'Here is your order for them sir,' replied the captain, coolly pulling out the letter.

From the Jamaica (L. I.) Farmer of Jan. 8.

Conjugal Felicity.—About three weeks since, a man who resides at Near-Rockaway, hung his wife! she was discovered, while in this situation, by a family who resided in the house with them, cut down, and after considerable exertion was resuscitated; the next day the husband compromised the affair with his wife, by purchasing a crape dress for her!! We are informed he had previously threatened to kill her. No notice has as yet been taken of this affair by the civil authorities of Hempstead!

The above, we have from unquestionable authority, but think proper, for the present, to withhold the name of the wretch.

As Paddy would say—when codfish is boiled, it ought not to be boiled at all.—It is however a little surprising that many a good house wife is not apprised, that the dumb, or dried codfish ought not to be boiled to have them tender; it operates as on an egg, an oyster and clam; the more you boil them the harder they grow—let them simmer on or near the fire, in a kettle, two or three hours, according as the fish are hard; and then change the water, and before dishing, put this up to near a boiling heat, but no higher This management don't draw out, but revives the gluitnous, and enlivens the nutricious substance in them, and leaves the fish tender and delicious.

The ice of each pole of the earth forms an immense cupola, the arch of which extends some thousand miles over the continents: the thickness of which, beyond the 60th degree of lattitude, is several hundred feet. The thickness of these cupolas is no doubt much greater, nearer the poles: for astronomy sometimes presents so vast an image of them, that the rotundity of the earth seems affected thereby. Capt. Cook could never approach the S. pole, where there is no land, nearer than the 70th degree of S. lattitude.

AN ENEMY'S COURTESY.

When the Crusaders under King Richard of England defeated the Saracens the Sultan seeing his troops fly, asked what was the number of the Christians making all this slaughter? He was told that it was only King Richard and his men, and that they were all on foot. 'Then' said the Sultan, 'God forbid that such a noble fellow as King Richard should march on foot,' and sent him a noble charger. The messenger took it, and said, 'Sire the Sultan sends you this charger that you may not be on foot.' The king was as cunning as his enemy, and ordered one of his squires to mount the horse in order to try him. The squire obeyed; but the animal proved fiery, and the squire being unable to hold him in, he set off at full speed to the Sultan's pavilion. The Sultan expected he had got King Richard, and was not a little mortified to find his mistake.

Alliterations.—The admirers of alliteration will be pleased with the following character of a young lady, from an old Newcastle Journal: —"Died, in the flower of her age, Miss Mary Harrison, daughter of the late Mr. Harrison, of Weldon Bridge House. If boundless benevolence be the basis of beatitude, and harmless humility the harbinger of a hallowed heart, these Christian concomitants composed her characteristic, and concilitated the esteem of her contemporary acquaintances, who meant to model their manners by the mould of their meritorious monitor."—There are but two instances, at least in our present recollection, which approach near to the above; the one is, Henry Hallam, hatter hosier, and haber dasher, at Holbourn-bridge, Hatton-garden; the other, "Benjamin Bell, brown bread and biscuit-baker, near Battersea-bridge." There is another on Cardinal Wolsey, better than either:

"Begot by butchers, but by bishops bred.
How high his Honour holds his haughty head."

At a small village in the neighbourhood of Blackburn, is written over the door the following inscription:—'HOLLAND, surgeon, carpenter, man-midwife, and school-master; likewise fine pens, and teeth drawn by the maker, also a curious assortment of Blacken Balls.'

A curious phenomenon now stands on the road-side to Brighton, on the estate of Mr. Seywell; it is a very large tree, half of which is oak, the other half beach.

Cross your t's although you spell wrong.—Capt. ——, of the schr ——, while at one of the West India Islands, received the following order, among others, from his owner: "I want you to get me loo Monkeys for a partikular purpose—Dont fail." In consequence of the word being misspelled, and the t not being crossed, the captain put himself to a great expense and considerably prolonged his voyage to accomplish the order in the sense he gave it. "Where have you been so long?" said the anxious owner on his return. "Looking for your ——— monkeys," said the enraged captain. 'and with all my paine I have been able to get but sixty out of the 100,' 'sixty Monkeys!' exclaimed the owner. 'why, I only wanted two.' 'Here is your order for them sir,' replied the captain, coolly pulling out the letter.

Conjugal Felicity.—About three weeks since, a man who resides at Near-Rockaway, hung his wife! she was discovered, while in this situation, by a family who resided in the house with them, cut down, and after considerable exertion was resusitated; the next day the husband compromised the affair with his wife, by purchasing a crape dress for her!! We are informed he had previously threatened to kill her. No notice has as yet been taken of this affair by the civil authorities of Hempstead!

The above, we have from unquestionable authority, but think proper, for the present, to withhold the name of the wretch.

As Paddy would say—when codfish is boiled, it ought not to be boiled at all.—It is however a little surprising that many a good house wife is not apprised that the dumb, or dried codfish ought not to be boiled to have them tender; it operates as on an egg, an oyster and clam; the more you boil them the harder they grow—let them simmer on or near the fire, in a kettle, two or three hours, according as the fish are hard; and then change the water, and before dishing, put this up to near a boiling heat, but no higher. This management don't draw out, but revives the glutinous, and enlivens the nutricious substance in them, and leaves the fish tender and delicious.

The ice of each pole of the earth forms an immense cupola, the arch of which extends some thousand miles over the continents; the thickness of which, beyond the 60th degree of lattitude, is several hundred feet. The thickness of these cupolas is no doubt much greater, nearer the poles: for astronomy sometimes presents so vast an image of them, that the rotundity of the earth seems affected thereby. Capt. Cook could never approach the S. pole, where there is no land, nearer than the 70th degree of S. lattitude.

FROM GIBRALTAR.

By the arrival of the brig Enos, at Salem, from Gibraltar, we have received from our correspondent a file of papers from July to the 16th of November.

An account of the affair of Gen. Colleye, at Penapola, which will be only in Nottingham

The Earl of Chatham, Governour of Gibraltar, arrived there on the 13th of November, and took the command.

The standards and colours of the different corps composing the Spanish land forces, and marines, are to be laid aside; and brass lions, 8 inches long of a proportionate height, holding the Book of Constitution, and fixed on stills, 8 Burgos feet high, and one inch and four lines in diameter, are to be adopted in their stead.

The Gazette of the Two Sicilies, of the 13th Oct. contains the following:—

'Nearly every province of this kingdom is infested with formidable and numerous bands of robbers, between whom, and the Austrian troops united to our Police, there are frequent skirmishes. The combats, in general, are not bloody, for the brigands flee at the approach of their pursuers. The Austrian troops and the Gensdarmes lately distinguished themselves in an attack upon the house of an Ex-Colonel, which he had fortified like a castle, and in which he considered himself secure. The Ex-Colonel was made a prisoner, and, in his castle, were found 7 muskets, 7 carbines, a sabre and a poinard. From the preparatory operations of the scrutiny, it appears that there are scarcely 5 judges in the whole kingdom who have not belonged to the sect of the Carbonari: the Comptrollers, the King's Attorneys, the Presidents, &c. are, for the most part, of the same class. What would be our situation, if the Austrians were to quit us for a moment?'

The Austrian troops in the fortresses of Piedmont amount to 14,000 men, and the annual subsidy, paid to the Government, to 8,000,000 fr.

FROM A LATE LONDON PAPER.

Extract of a letter from Paris, dated November 9.

A lamentable deed, which has just deprived one of our brave generals of an only son, still in his boyhood, is the exclusive topic of conversation in Paris. The son of general Freyre arrived from the country; happy to be near him, his father wished to keep him at home the whole evening. One of his friends came and offered him a place in a box at the theatre of Porte St. Martin, which he accepted. He went, during the entre-acte, to walk in the lobby, where a man passed close to him, and the young Freyre cautiously put aside a cane he had in his hand, that it might not touch him. 'Why do you shift your cane?' said this individual to him. 'Not to impede your passage,' replied the young Freyre. 'Your countenance displeases me, rejoined the aggressor. 'To-morrow,' answered the youth, looking him in the face, 'it will perhaps, be less offensive to you.' 'To-morrow!' exclaimed Dunalli, [which is the name of the bravo,] 'it is unnecessary to defer it so long; let us go out now.' Freyre immediately returned to his friend, and related to him the rencounter. Dunalli, to whom duelling is a welcome pastime, and who, previous to going to the theatre, had openly sworn that he would kill some one that evening, 'in order,' said he humanely, 'to make the Sylvanth,' he has always a store of arms and accomplices ready for his purposes. To provide swords was the business of a moment. They repaired to the Champs Elysees; the lamp of the garden Beaujon served to light them in the combat. The victim is ready. Freyre had scarcely put himself on his guard, when he received the mortal stab. He fell invoking the name of his father, whom he was never again to behold. Thus the fifteenth was numbered with the dead. The king's procureur is about to take legal cognisance of the affair.

MISCELLANEOUS SELECTIONS.

The letter of our [illegible] to be cousin-german to the New-York Knickerbockers. Alb. Reg.

From the Mississippi Republican.

DIED—At ——, in the neighbourhood of Franklin in Franklin county, Hans Hanson, of the old school of that metaphysical and thought-deserted nation, Hans, in his particularly dotish by every intellectual dictate of the neighbourhood, was a genius of no ordinary character, particularly for a Dutchman. The milk of human kindness was combined in his composition in no small proportion, and very few circumstances could call forth other feelings in the heart than those of the most extensive philanthropy. Hans was a poet original, and though he could not write, and barely possessed sufficient literature to enable him to read, he yet found a resource in a retentive memory, which enabled him to preserve, for the delight and edification of his friends, the various effusions of his muse. He often complained of the roughness of the English language, which he said was ill adapted to high poetical composition, narrowed the sphere of his usefulness, and controlled in a great degree his efforts to civilize the natives of the country. He however was nothing daunted by this difficulty; but made astonishing efforts to overcome it, confessed that his want of complete success might possibly be attributed to his slight acquaintance with the grammatical construction of this or indeed any other language. Hans was fond of his bottle, and adored his pipe, and he was want to say, that if any thing could overcome the rigidness of our tongue, it was the comfortable inspiration of the Indian weed. I beg Mr. Editor you will not for a moment suppose, that this was the name which he gave to that delightful stimulant. On the contrary he very stoutly maintained that the appropriation of the nativity of this plant by our countrymen to their own soil, was a striking evidence of that overweening vanity which was their characteristic foible, and which all good Dutchmen were bound to oppose to their last whiff. He manfully asserted the right of Holland to the glory of having given it birth, and uniformly instanced it as one of the many benefits which Europe, and especially Fader Land, had conferred on this western world.

One of his most labored compositions was in praise of this his prime favourite, and luckily for mankind, it has been immortalized, having been committed to paper by an ingenious schoolmaster of the neighbourhood, who had learned to write. After his death it was found in a small box containing his entire library, consisting of a Dutch Bible, and an Almanac, printed in 1797, the year he left Pennsylvania, where he was born, and sojourned in this barbarous land; an event which he contended, evinced little less hardihood of character than of yore distinguished his ancestors in their pilgrimage to the banks of the Hudson. It was neatly folded in the aforesaid almanac, a book which the good man always deemed one of his most especial treasures, but which by force of thumbing, is now nearly lost to the world. He regularly resorted to it to learn the day of the month, the changes of the moon, her rising and setting, as also the rising and setting of the sun; but it was more especially his oracle on the subject of the weather, and it was his constant practice to consult it before undertaking any affair of great importance, such as paying a visit to a neighbour, planting or cutting his tobacco, and other transactions of equal weight, in his uniform life. 'Tis true the aforesaid planets oftentimes most capriciously flew in the face of his oracle, manifestly setting at defiance its prognostications; but this never once staggered his faith in its complete authenticity. He used to say, that their strange conduct might be attributed to the new fangled notions existing it this latter world, on various subjects, particularly the sovereign contempt for three pair of breeches, which his neighbours never affected to conceal, and their obstinate adherence to modes of cultivation of the earth, which, as they did not agree with his own, he heartily detested. With regard to the weather too, he was frequently at a loss to account for the burning sun under which he suffered, when he was told to 'look out for a severe storm of snow and cold frosty weather about these days.' If any thing called him from home, when such fearful words as these had been anxiously spelled out by him opposite to the day of the month fixed for his journey, he was sure to add to his habiliments all the breeches, coats, and greatcoats, which his ample wardrobe contained—and while labouring under their weight, has been heard to declare, that 'shnow un vrosts vas mity tifferent dings in hims gundree.' He persevered however in wearing the additional garments, and always congratulated himself on his arrival at his own comfortable mansion, that he had suffered much less with cold than he could have expected. But it is time to reward your patience by closing this article with the metrical chef d'œuvre of the good man's, before mentioned, which is copied verbatim et literatim from the manuscript of the aforesaid erudite school-master:

The last verse I consider as much superior to the rest, and exhibits a considerable improvement in Hans' command of language. Doubtless the affectionate remembrance of

LIVERPOOL.

From the Franklin Gazette.

Although the disease of cancer has baffled all skill hitherto, it is desirable to publish every means to enable regarding the nature of disease and the most proper means for its removal, yet there are some cases, probably depending on constitutional idiosyncrasy, which very frequently resist all the known remedies. Cancer and syphilis are among these: they frequently take on peculiar and horrible forms in the latter stages, producing pains, stupor, and a train of evils, which continue to increase in despite of all the known remedies.

The following facts, however, show that a remedy for these diseases in their worst forms, is within the reach of our practitioners. At the lecture delivered on the 14th ultimo, at the University of Pennsylvania, by professor Gibson, two patients were exhibited who had been afflicted with ulceration in its most frightful form for several years; the throat, lips and nose, as well as the bones and soft parts of the face were partly destroyed in both patients; and in one an eye was entirely lost. The learned professor in the course of his lecture stated, the cases of these patients; that they had been treated in the usual way without success; and that they were finally restored to perfect health by the use of a medicine recently introduced in this city, known by the name of Swaim's Panacea.

I deem this communication a just tribute to the virtues of a medicine which I think bids fair to be the means of relieving a great deal of human suffering: That remedy which a learned and respectable professor has thought worthy of particular notice before a numerous class of students, would seem to have claims to the attention of every professor of the healing art. A STUDENT.

"Hung be the Heavens with Black,"

We have heretofore noticed the performances of a black corps dramatique in this city, at their Theatre, at the corner of Bleecker & Mercer-streets. It appears that the sable managers, not satisfied with a small share of profit, and a great portion of fame, determined to rival the great Park theatre, belonging to Messers. Beekman and Astor, and accordingly hired the Hotel next door to the Theatre, where they announced their performances. The audiences were generally of a riotous character, and amused themselves by throwing crackers on the stage, and cracking their jokes with the actors, until danger from fire, and civil discord, rendered it necessary to break up the establishment. The ebony colored wags were notified by the Police, that they must announce their last performance; but they, defying the public authority, went on and acted nightly. It was at length considered necessary to interpose the arm of authority, and on Monday evening a dozen watchmen made part of the audience.—The play was Richard. The watchmen interrupted the royal Plantagent in one of his soliloquies, with —Hallo you, there—come along with me. Richard replied, with a real tragic grin, "Fellow begone—I am not at leisure." —Not at leisure? says the watchman: we'll find time for you, so come along.——Several immediately ascended the stage, and arrested his Majesty.——Where am I going, said he; 'To do Tower?' No, to the watch house, said the Knights of the Lantern—so forthwith Richard, Richmond, Lady Ann, the dead King Henry, Queen Elizabeth, and the two young Princes, were escorted, in their tinselled robes, to the watch house, into which they marched with royal contempt and defiance. King Richard dropped his character and assumed Macbeth, and on his entrance, broke out—

'How now, you black and secret
Midnight hags—what are you about;'

Come, come, said the watch, none of your play acting airs—into the black hole with you. The sable corps were thrust into one green room together, where, for some time, they were loud and theatrical; ever and anon, one would thrust his head through a circular hold to survey the grim visages of the watchmen. Finally, they plead so hard in blank verse, and promised never to act Shakespeare again, that the Police magistrates released them at a very late hour.—Nat Advocate.

Seldom have the inhabitants of Virginia been presented with a more tragical scene, than was witnessed in Mecklenburgh. James Hunt, who lives near Spanish Grove in this county, his three daughters, one about 18 years old, one about 12, and the youngest about 8, and a negro boy about the age of thirteen, were all the persons belonging to his family. Mr. Hunt having gone to Richmond, left his three daughters and the negro boy at home. On Thursday evening the 13th of December, the eldest daughter chastised the boy for some misconduct. At their usual hour the three girls went to bed, their bedding having been previously placed on the floor near the fire. A short time before day the girls caused the boy to make a fire, and again went to sleep, but they soon slept the sleep of death, for the boy irritated by the chastisement lately received, and instigated by a diabolical desire of revenge, as soon as he perceived them tranquil, horridly murdered the three sisters as they lay asleep, by beating out their brains with an axe. Having remained after the perpetration of the murder until day, took

The late Dr. Franklin concludes a letter to his friend, G. Whatey, Esq. (written May 10, 1787,) in the following words:

'You are now 78, and I am 82—You tread fast upon my heels: but though you have more strength and spirit, you cannot come up with me till I stop, which must be soon: for I have grown so old as to have buried most of the friends of my youth; and I now often hear persons whom I know when children, called old Mr. Such-a-one, to distinguish them from their sons, now men grown and in business: so that living twelve years beyond David's period, I seem to have intruded myself into the company of posterity, when I ought to be abed and asleep. Yet had I gone at 70, it would have cut off twelve of the most active years of my life, employed too in matters of the greatest importance; but whether I have been doing good or mischief, is for time to discover. I only know that I intended well; and I hope all will end well.'

FROM GIBRALTAR.

By the arrival of the brig Essex, at Salem, from Gibraltar, we have received from our correspondent a file of papers from July to the 16th of November.

The Austrian troops and the Genedarmes lately distinguished themselves in an attack upon the house of an Ex-Colonel, which he had fortified like a castle, and in which he considered himself secure. The Ex-Colonel was made a prisoner, and, in his castle, were found 7 muskets, 7 carbines, a sabre and a poinard. From the preparatory operations of the scrutiny, it appears that there are scarcely 5 judges in the whole kingdom who have not belonged to the sect of the Carbonari: the Comptrollers, the King's Attorneys, the Presidents, &c. are, for the most part, of the same class. What would be our situation, if the Austrians were to quit us for a moment?'

The Austrian troops in the fortresses of Piedmont amount to 14,000 men, and the annual subsidy, paid to the Government, to 8,000,000 fr.

FROM A LATE LONDON PAPER.

Extract of a letter from Paris, dated November 8.

A lamentable duel, which has just deprived one of our brave generals of an only son, still in his boyhood, is the exclusive topic of conversation in Paris. The son of general Freyre arrived from the country; happy to be near him, his father wished to keep him at home the whole evening. One of his friends came and offered him a place in a box at the theatre of Porte St. Martin, which he accepted. He went, during the entre-acte, to walk in the lobby, where a man passed close to him, and the young Freyre cautiously put aside a cane he had in his hand, that it might not touch him. 'Why do you shift your cane?' said this individual to him. 'Not to impede your passage,' replied the young Freyre. 'Your countenance displeases me, rejoined the aggressor. 'To-morrow,' answered the youth, looking him in the face, 'it will perhaps, be less offensive to you.' 'To-morrow!' exclaimed Dunalli, [which is the name of the bravo,] 'it is unnecessary to defer it so long; let us go out now.' Freyre immediately returned to his friend, and related to him the rencounter. Dunalli, to whom duelling is a welcome pastime, and who, previous to going to the theatre, had openly sworn that he would kill some one that evening, 'in order,' said he humanely, 'to make the fifteenth,' he has always a store of arms and accomplices ready for his purposes. To provide swords was the business of a moment. They repaired to the Champs Elysees; the lamp of the garden Beaujon served to light them in the combat. The victim is ready. Freyre had scarcely put himself on his guard, when he received the mortal stab. He fell invoking the name of his father, whom he was never again to behold. Thus the fifteenth was numbered with the dead. The king's procureur is about to take legal cognizance of the affair.

MISCELLANEOUS SELECTIONS.

The writer of the following article must be cousin-german to the New-York Knickerbockers. Alb. Reg.

From the Mississippi Republican.

DIED—At ——, in the neighbourhood of Franklin in Franklin county, Hans Hesman, of the old school of that methodical and streight-forward nation. Hans, as he was familiarly called by every white-headed urchin of the neighbourhood, was a genius of no ordinary, character, particularly for a Dutchman. The milk of human kindness was contained in his composition in no small proportion, and very few circumstances could call forth other feelings in his heart than those of the most extensive philanthropy. Hans was a poet withal, and though he could not write, and barely possessed sufficient literature to enable him to read, he yet found a resource in a retentive memory, which enabled him to preserve, for the delight and edification of his friends, the various effusions of his muse. He often complained of the roughness of the English language, which he said was ill adapted to high poetical composition, narrowed the sphere of his usefulness, and controlled in a great degree his efforts to civilize the natives of the country. He however was nothing daunted by this difficulty; but made astonishing efforts to overcome it, confessed that his want of complete success might possibly be attributed to his slight acquaintance with the gramatical construction of this or indeed any other language. Hans was fond of his bottle, and adored his pipe, and he was want to say, that if any thing could overcome the rigidness of our tongue, it was the comfortable inspiration of the Indian weed. I beg Mr. Editor you will not for a moment suppose, that this was the name which he gave to that delightful stimulant. On the contrary he very stoutly maintained that the appropriation of the nativity of this plant by our countrymen to their own soil, was a striking evidence of that overweening vanity which was their characteristic foible, and which all good Dutchmen were bound to oppose to their last whiff. He manfully asserted the right of Holland to the glory of having given it birth, and uniformly instanced it as one of the many benefits which Europe, and especially Fader Land, had conferred on this western world.

One of his most labored compositions was in praise of this his prime favourite, and luckily for mankind, it has been immortalized, having been committed to paper by an ingenious schoolmaster of the neighbourhood, who had learned to write. After his death it was found in a small box containing his entire library, consisting of a Dutch Bible, and an Almanac, printed in 1797, the year he left Pennsylvania, where he was born, and sojourned in this barbarous land; an event which he contended, evinced little less hardihood of character than of yore distinguished his ancestors in their pilgrimage to the banks of the Hudson. It was neatly folded in the aforesaid almanac, a book which the good man always deemed one of his most especial treasures, but which by force of thumbing, is now nearly lost to the world. He regularly resorted to it to learn the day of the month, the changes of the moon, her rising and setting, as also the rising and setting of the sun; but it was more especially his oracle on the subject of the weather, and it was his constant practice to consult it before undertaking any affair of great importance, such as paying a visit to a neighbour, planting or cutting his tobacco, and other transactions of equal weight, in his uniform life. 'Tis true the aforesaid planets oftentimes most capriciously flew in the face of his oracle, manifestly setting at defiance its prognostications; but this never once staggered his faith in its complete authenticity. He used to say, that their strange conduct might be attributed to the new fangled notions existing it this latter world, on various subjects, particularly the sovereign contempt for three pair of breeches, which his neighbours never affected to conceal, and their obstinate adherence to modes of cultivation of the earth, which, as they did not agree with his own, he heartily detested. With regard to the weather too, he was frequently at a loss to account for the burning sun under which he suffered, when he was told to 'look out for a severe storm of snow and cold frosty weather about these days.' If any thing called him from home, when such fearful words as these had been anxiously spelled out by him opposite to the day of the month fixed for his journey, he was sure to add to his habiliments all the breeches, coats, and greatcoats, which his ample wardrobe contained—and while labouring under their weight, has been heard to declare, that 'shnow un vrosts vas mity tifferent dings in hims gundree.' He persevered however in wearing the additional garments, and always congratulated himself on his arrival at his own comfortable mansion, that he had suffered much less with cold than he could have expected. But it is time to reward your patience by closing this article with the metrical chef d'œuvre of the good man's, before mentioned, which is copied verbatim et literatim from the manuscript of the aforesaid erudite school-master:

Lins on Tobaker.

O Tobaker is a werry bretty vede,
Uut gros in Ferginny, Caneduk, and Denasee also,
Unt in meny uder lairge douns dat I have zede,
Unt is dé wery firse of gumferts vur al mens Ino.
Sum vellurs ven tobaker dey virst bekin vur du daik,
Ad virst dey are very sic, and make ugle faises,
Bud I always luf'd it petter als a gaik,
Ur eny ding dat vun can git in dis here doun,
Dat after Langiader is de wery furst of blaces.

The last verse I consider as much superior to the rest, and exhibits a considerable improvement in Hans' command of language. Doubtless the affectionate remembrance of the frank confidingness of his wife, on her conversion from the errors of her ways to a proper attachment to tobacco, added vigor to his imagination. It is as follows:

Mi vife vas werry bretty ven I marryt hur,
But she voud skole and boder pout myne bipe;
But afore do hur leave my nabors karryt hur,
She vowd she luvd it petter als she kud speak.

For the Franklin Gazette.

Although the science of medicine has arrived at such perfection, as to enable its professors to decide regarding the nature of disease and the most proper means for its removal, yet there are some cases, probably depending on constitutional idiosyncrasy, which very frequently resist all the known remedies. Scrofula and syphilis are among these: they frequently take on peculiar and horrible forms in the latter stages, producing pains, ulcers, and a train of evils, which continue to increase in despite of all the known remedies.

The following facts, however, show that a remedy for these diseases in their worst forms, is within the reach of our practitioners. At the lecture delivered on the 14th ultimo, at the University of Pennsylvania, by professor Gibson, two patients were exhibited who had been afflicted with ulceration in its most frightful form for several years; the throat, lips and nose, as well as the bones and soft parts of the face were partly destroyed in both patients; and in one an eye was entirely lost. The learned professor in the course of his lecture stated, the cases of these patients; that they had been treated in the usual way without success; and that they were finally restored to perfect health by the use of a medicine recently introduced in this city, known by the name of Swaim's Panacea.

I deem this communication a just tribute to the virtues of a medicine which I think bids fair to be the means of relieving a great deal of human suffering: That remedy which a learned and respectable professor has thought worthy of particular notice before a numerous class of students, would seem to have claims to the attention of every professor of the healing art.

"Hung be the Heavens with black,"

We have heretofore noticed the performances of a black corps dramatique in this city, at their Theatre, at the corner of Bleecker & Mercer-streets. It appears that the sable managers, not satisfied with a small share of profit, and a great portion of fame, determined to rival the great Park theatre, belonging to Messers. Beekman and Astor, and accordingly hired the Hotel next door to the Theatre where they announced their performances. The audiences were generally of a riotous character, and amused themselves by throwing crackers on the stage, and cracking their jokes with the actors, until danger from fire, and civil discord, rendered it necessary to break up the establishment. The ebony colored wags were notified by the Police, that they must announce their last performance; but they, defying the public authority, went on and acted nightly. It was at length considered necessary to interpose the arm of authority, and on Monday evening a dozen watchmen made part of the audience.—The play was Richard. The watchmen interrupted the royal Plantagent in one of his soliloquies, with —Hallo you, there—come along with me. Richard replied, with a real tragic grin, "Fellow begone—I am not at leisure." —Not at leisure? says the watchman: we'll find time for you, so come along. ——Several immediately ascended the stage, and arrested his Majesty-——Where am I going, said he; 'To de Tower?' No, to the watch house, said the Knights of the Lantern—so forthwith Richard, Richmond, Lady Ann, the dead King Henry, Queen Elizabeth, and the two young Princes, were escorted, in their tinselled robes, to the watch house, into which they marched with royal contempt and defiance. King Richard dropped his character and assumed Macbeth, and on his entrance, broke out—

'How now, you black and secret
Midnight hags—what are you about;'

Come, come, said the watch, none of your play acting airs—into the black hole with you. The sable corps were thrust into one green room together, where, for some time, they were loud and theatrical; ever and anon, one would thrust his head through a circular hold to survey the grim visages of the watchmen. Finally, they plead so hard in blank verse, and promised never to act Shakespeare again, that the Police magistrates released them at a very late hour.—Nat Advocate.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Jan. 12.

Seldom have the inhabitants of Virginia been presented with a more tragical scene, than was witnessed in Mecklenburgh. James Hunt, who lives near Spanish Grove in this county, his three daughters, one about 18 years old, one about 12, and the youngest about 8, and a negro boy about the age of thirteen, were all the persons belonging to his family. Mr. Hunt having gone to Richmond, left his three daughters and the negro boy at home. On Thursday evening the 13th of December, the eldest daughter chastised the boy for some misconduct. At their usual hour the three girls went to bed, their bedding having been previously placed on the floor near the fire. A short time before day the girls caused the boy to make a fire, and again went to sleep, but they soon slept the sleep of death, for the boy irritated by the chastisement lately received, and instigated by a diabolical desire of revenge, as soon as he perceived them tranquil, horridly murdered the three sisters as they lay asleep, by beating out their brains with an axe. Having remained after the perpetration of the murder until day, took whatever he imagined valuable to him, and then set fire to the house, which was burnt down, and every article of Mr. Hunt's household furniture was consumed: several persons who saw the fire hastened to the spot and got the girls out before they were consumed. But so deformed were they by the fire that no human beings ever presented a more horrible appearance. Upon taking the boy up, he confessed every circumstance. A coroner's jury upon examining into the case, called him before them, when he stated to the jury every circumstance agreeable to his former confessions. He is now in jail; and no doubt ample justice will be rendered to one whose youthful villanies has been so execrable.

Extraordinary Despatch.

An instance of the quickest communication between New-York and New-Orleans, perhaps ever known, has recently occurred, having been effected by two of the brigs belonging to the line of packets. The time required for this communication by mail, is about sixty days.—Lan. Journal.

NEW MINERAL SUBSTANCE.

The Quebec Gazette of the 13th December, states, that Mr J. Denchar had found a few weeks ago, a mineral substance embedded in striped limestone. It melts at the candle and burns on a wick, or paper; nor is it acted upon in the cold, after five days exposure to sulphuric, muriatic or nitric acid. He is now engaged with its analysis.

Distressing Event.—A gentleman just arrived in town informs, that Mr. Thomas Beal, who lived a few miles west of this, perished this evening by fire! Mr. Beal has been of late subject to fitful alienations of mind, and it was in one of these that he has destroyed himself, it is said, by setting fire to his mansion, in which he was alone, and consuming himself together with all his effects.

The report has been fully confirmed.

Providential Escape from Drowning.—On Wednesday last as Captain Henry Quiner, of Marblehead, with his daughter Susan, and son Henry, were sitting in a chaise, conversing with a gentleman on the wharf, the horse growing restive backed over the capstan and immersed the whole in the water, breaking the ice in the fall, which was about 15 feet, the daughter sunk twice, the father and son kept themselves up by holding on the chaise and broken ice; the horse prevented their sinking by keeping his fore feet firm on the ice. Aid was immediately afforded, and they were all taken out without much injury.

CAUTION.

A market man, a few days ago, was asked what he would take for his pork, the bargain was struck for two hogs, if the man would deliver them at the buyer's house up town, which was agreed to. When the market man had carried the hogs a square or two, the purchaser concluded to take the last at the same price—said he would stay by those bought until the seller should return & bring the others. Unsuspicious of roguery, the countryman went and brought up the remaining part of his load, but never heard of the two first hogs since, or the rascal who bought them.

Dr. Franklin.

The late Dr. Franklin concludes a letter to his friend, G. Whatey, Esq. (written May 18, 1787,) in the following words:

'You are now 78, and I am 82—You tread fast upon my heels: but though you have more strength and spirit, you cannot come up with me till I stop, which must be soon: for I have grown so old as to have buried most of the friends of my youth; and I now often hear persons whom I knew when children, called old Mr. Such-a-one, to distinguish them from their sons, now men grown and in business: so that living twelve years beyond David's period, I seem to have intruded myself into the company of posterity, when I ought to be abed and asleep. Yet, had I gone at 70, it would have cut off twelve of the most active years of my life, employed too in matters of the greatest importance, but whether I have been doing good or mischief, is for time to discover. I only know that I intended well; and I hope all will end well.'

GAZETTE.

FRIDAY MORNING, JANUARY 25, 1822.

From the Washington Gazette.

We have already published an outline of the provisions of Mr. Baldwin's resolution, the following is the new tariff proposed thereto—to wit:

That there shall be levied and paid upon the following articles imported into the United States, in ships or vessels of the United States, the several duties hereinafter mentioned, over and above the duties now payable by law, viz:

On iron, in the bar or bolts, per hundred weight, fifty cents.

On hemp, per hundred weight, one dollar.

On lead, and all manufactures thereof, per pound two cents.

On glass, of all kinds, six cents per pound.

On all articles paying a duty of seven and a half per cent and twenty per cent, ad valorem, and on all articles not free, not subject to any other rate of duty, (raw silk excepted) five per centum ad valorem.

On all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is a component material, (raw silks excepted) fifteen per centum ad valorem.

On linen, and all other articles of which flax is a component material, ten per centum ad valorem.

That the duties now in force upon the articles hereinafter enumerated and described, at their importation into the United States, shall cease; and that in lieu thereof, there shall thenceforth be laid, levied, and collected, upon the said articles, at the importation, the several and respective rates of duties following, that is to say:

On slates and tiles for building, not exceeding twelve inches square, two dollars per thousand; over twelve inches square, and not exceeding fourteen inches square, three dollars per thousand: over fourteen and not exceeding sixteen inches square, four dollars per thousand; over sixteen and not exceeding eighteen inches square, five dollars per thousand; over eighteen and not exceeding twenty-four inches square, six dollars per thousand.

On bricks, three dollars per thousand.

On all royal, super royal, imperial, elephant, medium, demy, crown, folio, quarto post, cap and post paper, suitable for writing, or blank books, and all drawing and copper plate paper, twenty cents per pound.

On all paper suitable for staining and for printing, twelve cents per pound.

On all other paper, two cents per pound.

On screws of iron, commonly called wood screws, not exceeding one inch in length, eight cents per groce; over one inch and not exceeding two inches in length, fourteen cents per groce; over two inches in length; twenty cents per groce.

On linseed oil, twenty-five cents per gallon.

Retrenchment.—A resolution in the senate proposing to reduce congressional compensation and the salaries of all the executive officers, was, after some discussion, laid on the table. CONGRESS.

SENATE.—January 7.

THE CUMBERLAND ROAD.

The bill providing for keeping in repair the national road from Cumberland to the Ohio, was taken up, and having been read—

Mr. Chandler remarked that he did not find in the bill any provision for cases where persons might forcibly pass the gates without paying the toll required.

Mr. R. M. Johnson, of Ken. said, that the expediency of such a provision had not escaped the committee; but they concluded that, as such a clause would involve a question of constitutionality, and of course of some difficulty, it would be better to avoid the impediment which it might present, by reporting the bill in the naked form in which it was presented, and leave to future legislation such a provision, if it should be found necessary.

On motion of Mr. Johnson, of Kentucky, the blank left in the bill for the salary of the Superintendant of the road was filled with 1,000 dollars.

Mr. Eaton hoped the Senate would consent to postpone the further consideration of the bill for some days. It presented a question which required deliberation. He had seen enough and heard enough latterly about state rights, and it was proper to proceed cautiously in the adoption of any measure which might possibly produce further collision with the states. He moved that the bill be postponed to next Wednesday week; which motion prevailed, and

The bill was postponed accordingly.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

Mr Wooldon submitted the following joint resolution for consideration:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, two thirds of both houses concurring, that the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States, be proposed to the legislature of the several states, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three fourths of the states, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as a part of said constitution:—No person shall be eligible to the office of President of the United States, from and after the fourth day of March 1826, who shall or may have held, or exercised any other office of honour profit or trust, under the government of the United States, or any of its departments, at any time within the four years next preceding his election, nor unless he may have attained to the age of forty-five years.

This resolve was ordered to lie one day on the table.

Mr. Niles at Washington.—The editor of the 'Weekly Register,' has a singular, if not an original manner of communicating what he has to say, which is often piquant and forcible.—In one of his late papers he holds "a fireside conversation with his readers and friends, on things of deep interest to them and himself."—A brief extract may be of some 'interest' to other readers.—N. Whig.

"When I tarried at Washington [says he,] last winter, I went to our house, (commonly called the president's) one evening, for the first—and most probably for the last—time, what is called "the drawing room;" where, indeed, I was much pleased to meet with several gentlemen that I should feel a pride in meeting with any where, and who would have done honor to any country; and the affability, the, I care-for-nobody sort of conduct that prevailed, was very suitable to my disposition.

There was a large number of men and women present; yet a great degree of order was observed, honorable to the parties congregated on the occasion. There were fat widows and slim misses; one of the latter who appeared to be the goddess of the evening, was so fettered and laced as to cause me to apprehend that if she had the misfortune to fall down, we should have to lift her up, 'right-on-end,' like an oak log, not being bendable—besides these, there was a supply of demi men, some of them amused me not a little with their tricks. But there was a certain woman whose splendid appearance attracted much attention—her gorgeous dress raised the yankee so much within me, that I asked her name. It was—no matter what; the wife or daughter of one of those standing recorded on an auditor's book, as a large defaulter, for more than three years. On this, not very gallantly, perhaps, instead of doing homage to the charms of the lady, I began to count the part that had been taken from my pocket to fit her out, and I supposed that it amounts to as much as would give a meal's victuals to as worthy a person as she; for the cost of her ornaments was trumpeted in my ear by one that stood near me, as if he had been informed of them for that purpose. On retiring, which I pretty soon did, the thought occurred of suggesting to the president, that a copy of every auditor's list bound up in WOLF'S skin, should be nailed to the door post of the grand entrance of the drawing room, with instructions to the servants to admit no man, or his family, whose name was to be found therein, not that I would be rude to the ladies—but according to my notion of things, the wives and daughters of such persons would be much better engaged at home darning stockings than in parading before the public, insulting even the chief magistrate of the nation with an exhibition of their spoliations on the people. I mentioned this idea to a member of congress and he laughed heartily at it—but said, if all such were excluded from the drawing room, it would lose much of its brilliancy—and in this I was forced to agree with him. So not being encouraged in my old fashioned notions of decency, I gave up the project as hopeless—until it shall become fashionable for people to strive to pay their debts by industry and economy. I am not without hope that the period is fast approaching. May heaven hasten the time, when those that 'fear God and pay twenty shillings on the pound,' will be at the top of the wheel again."

We are indebted to our correspondents, the Editors of the New York Gazette, for the following letter; in addition to which we learn by the arrival of the brig Ambuscade, from Havana, that a French brig, from Havre de Grace, for Havana, was attacked on the 22d of December, off Mariel, by two piratical boats. The brig succeeded in beating off the pirates, and arrived at the port of destination, with the loss of her supercargo, who was killed by a shot from one of the boats.

PIRACY.

Captain O'Brien, of the Ambuscade, has favored the Editors of the Gazette with the following letter to him, from W. B. Smith:

'The ship Liverpool Packet, from Portsmouth, New Hampshire, was boarded on the 9th instant by a Columbian cruiser, and the passengers, 16 in number, were robbed of every thing; the captain and crew were treated politely, although the Columbians took from them a quantity of provisions, and did not pay for them, because, as they said, they could not; the passengers were Spaniards. On the 16th off Cape St. Antonio, [Cuba,] she was boarded by two piratical schooners, and two barges, containing 90 or 40 men, who robbed the vessel of every thing moveable, even to her flags, rigging, and one boat which happened to be afloat, with a boy belonging to the ship in her. Not satisfied with this, they held a consultation whether they should murder the crew as they had done to others before, or not; in the mean time, the ship was taken to anchoring ground and after they had brought her to anchor, the people belonging to the ship saw a brig close alongside, burnt down to the water's edge, and three dead bodies floating near her. This brig the pirates said they had burnt the day before, after having murdered all her crew, and intended doing the same with the ship; they requested the ship's people to observe the turtles [meaning the dead bodies,] and told them they would soon be the same.

The brig, they said, belonged to Baltimore, and that they had robbed her and murdered all her crew, and of the truth of this there appears little doubt. The captain was shockingly bruised by them. He stripped himself and exposed himself to me, in presence of captain Wilkinson, of the brig Maine, from Philadelphia, and I never saw a man more bruised. The mate was hung and supposed to be dead; he however came to himself again, and is alive. The captain shewed me where they had cut the cabin with their muskets to terrify them. They told him they belonged to Regio, and should kill them all to prevent discovery, They knew the person who told him this personally. There is no doubt these vessels are sailing from this place weekly in the quality of coasters.'

He informed me that the Pirates have their dwellings on or near Cape Antonio, north side; he supposes they were fifty in number. The above letter was handed to me by a gentleman at Havana. The statement is correct, as captain Ricker ralated the same to me.

From the New-York American.

Two or three days ago a communication was received by our police, from Philadelphia, giving advice that some recent villanies had been committed there by three notorious rogues, who had lately returned from a plundering excursion to the west and south, and were supposed to have gone on to New York. Their names, as nearly as they could be ascertained and descriptions of their persons were given in the communication, & our magistrates requested if possible, to take them up. Three officers were dispatched on Thursday morning, and spent the day in pursuit of them, but without success. They discovered, however, that three men answering to the description, had been seen that day in the city. Presuming that they would very soon probably have letters directed to them through the post office from their confederates abroad, the marshals left a request with the clerks of the office, that, if any letters came directed to either of the suspected characters, they should not be delivered until personally called for.

Yesterday morning a letter from the south, did arrive at the office for one of them, and soon after the southern mail came in, he went in person, the other two also bearing him company, and took it out. They then dispersed, and by different circuitous routes came together again, some time after, at the battery, where the officers met them, and about 12 o'clock brought them to the office.

On examination they all denied ever having had any acquaintance with each other before, and affirmed, that their meeting on the battary was purely accidental. Some thousand dollars were found upon them, most of it supposed to be good. The letter which one of them had just received, had been destroyed, or effectually secreted, and was not to be found. They were well dressed, and genteel looking men. Two of them were recognized as old offenders, and former tenants of our state prison and penitentiary. The other could not be positively recollected by any among the officers or magistrates who were present; but is conjectured to be a notorious villain, considered to be the greatest counterfeiter in America. They were all committed to Bridewell till sent for by the governor of Pennsylvania.

It may be recollected, that the Philadelphia papers about a fortnight ago, gave an account of the apprehension of two men in that city on suspicion of passing counterfeit money, and that, on search, a miniature likeness of a lady, set in gold, and marked S. S. was found in the trunk of one of them. They were discharged for want of proof; it is asserted by good authority, that two of those taken up yesterday were the men; and that the lady is a Miss Susan S. a well known citizen of New York.

Several recent and extensive frauds and forgeries, on different places, on both banks and individuals, it is confidently hoped, will be brought to light by the apprehension of the fugitives from Philadelphia.

MATRIMONY.

A curious circumstance lately occurred on the subject of this holy state. A couple engaged themselves to be married, the day was fixed; the company invited, the ring, the parson, the cake, and all the other occasional comforts was prepared; the bride and bridegroom, dressed and perfumed, were seated near the fire billing and cooing, every thing was ready; when lo! and behold, just before the parson said these ominous words "love, honour, and obey," the fickle bridegroom changed his mind, and refused to marry. In vain were the prayers of entreaties of friends urged; in vain the tears and anger of the bride exhibited; the gay Lothario was inexorable. Here sat the bride overwhelmed with grief, there the iced plumb cake and cordial untouched, while reason and argument were thrown away upon the obstinate lover. At length the friends of the bride became enraged, and at two o'clock in the morning, were about beating the bridegroom into a compliance, with his engagements, when he made his escape & the next morning swore the peace against those guests who had attempted to thump him into matrimony, when these facts leaked out, and the parties were bound over.

Fatal effects of Intemperance.—On New-Year day, a man by the name of Lewis Lucky, of the town of Warwick, drank so much liquor as to cause his death. He had been drinking considerable through the day, when, on drinking down at one time, nearly a half pint of whiskey, he fell, and died shortly after, an awful death indeed! and a solemn warning to those who venture to indulge themselves in this destructive vice.

GAZETTE.

FRIDAY MORNING, JANUARY 25, 1822.

From the Washington Gazette.

We have already published an outline of the provisions of Mr. Baldwin's resolution, the following is the new tariff proposed thereon—to wit:

That there shall be levied and paid upon the following articles imported into the United States, in ships or vessels of the United States, the several duties hereinafter mentioned, over and above the duties now payable by law, viz:

On iron, in the bar or bolts, per hundred weight, fifty cents.

On hemp, per hundred weight, one dollar.

On lead, and all manufactures thereof, per pound two cents.

On glass, of all kinds, six cents per pound.

On all articles paying a duty of seven and a half per cent and twenty per cent, ad valorem, and on all articles not free, not subject to any other rate of duty, (raw silk excepted) five per centum ad valorem.

On all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is a component material, (raw silks excepted) fifteen per centum ad valorem.

On linen, and all other articles of which flax is a component material, ten per centum ad valorem.

That the duties now in force upon the articles hereinafter enumerated and described, at their importation into the United States, shall cease; and that in lieu thereof, there shall thenceforth be laid, levied, and collected, upon the said articles, at the importation, the several and respective rates of duties following, that is to say:

On slates and tiles for building, not exceeding twelve inches square, two dollars per thousand; over twelve inches square, and not exceeding fourteen inches square three dollars per thousand: over fourteen and not exceeding sixteen inches square, four dollars per thousand; over sixteen and not exceeding eighteen inches square, five dollars per thousand; over eighteen and not exceeding twenty-four inches square, six dollars per thousand.

On bricks, three dollars per thousand.

On all royal, super royal, imperial, elephant, medium, demy, crown, folio quarto post, cap and post paper, suitable for writing, or blank books, and all drawing and copper plate paper, twenty cents per pound.

On all paper suitable for staining and for printing, twelve cents per pound.

On all other paper, two cents per pound.

On screws of iron, commonly called wood screws, not exceeding one inch in length, eight cents per groce; over one inch and not exceeding two inches in length, fourteen cents per groce; over two inches in length; twenty cents per groce.

On linseed oil, twenty-five cents per gallon.

Retrenchment.—A resolution in the senate proposing to reduce congressional compensation and the salaries of all the executive officers, was, after some discussion, laid on the table. A resolve having a similar object in view, was, on Monday rejected, in the house of representatives, by a respectable majority, who refused to consider it. ib.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.—January 7.

THE CUMBERLAND ROAD.

The bill providing for keeping in repair the national road from Cumberland to the Ohio, was taken up, and having been read—

Mr. Chandler remarked that he did not find in the bill any provision for cases where persons might forcibly pass the gates without paying the toll required.

Mr. R. M. Johnson, of Ken. said, that the expediency of such a provision had not escaped the committee; but they concluded that, as such a clause would involve a question of constitutionality, and of course of some difficulty, it would be better to avoid the impediment which it might present, by reporting the bill in the naked from in which it was presented, and leave to future legislation such a provision, if it should be found necessary.

On motion of Mr. Johnson, of Kentucky the blank left in the bill for the salary of the Superintendant of the road was filled with 1,000 dollars.

Mr. Eaton hoped the Senate would consent to postpone the further consideration of the bill for some days. It presented a question which required deliberation. He had seen enough and heard enough latterly about state rights, and it was proper to proceed cautiously to the adoption of any measure which might possibly produce further collision with the states. He moved that the bill be postponed to next Wednesday week; which motion prevailed, and

The bill was postponed accordingly.

House of Representatives.

JANUARY 10.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

Mr Wooddon submitted the following joint resolution for consideration:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, two thirds of both houses concurring, that the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States, be proposed to the legislature of the several states, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three fourths of the states, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as a part of said constitution:—No person shall be elegible to the office of President of the United States, from and after the fourth day of March 1826, who shall or may have held, or exercised any other office of honour profit or trust, under the government of the United States, or any of its departments, at any time within the four years next preceding his election, nor unless he may have attained to the age of forty-five years.

This resolve was ordered to lie one day on the table.

Mr. Niles at Washington.—The editor of the 'Weekly Register,' has a singular, if not an original manner of communicating what he has to say, which is often piquant and forcible.—In one of his late papers he holds "a fireside conversation with his readers and friends, on things of deep interest to them and himself."—A brief extract may be of some 'interest' to other readers.—N. Whig.

"When I tarried at Washington [says he,] last winter, I went to our house, (commonly called the president's) one evening, for the first—and most probably for the last—time, what is called "the drawing room;" where, indeed, I was much pleased to meet with several gentlemen that I should feel a pride in meeting with any where, and who would have done honor to any country; and the affability; the, I care-for-nobody sort of conduct that prevailed, was very suitable to my disposition.

There was a large number of men and women present; yet a great degree of order was observed, honorable to the parties congregated on the occasion. There were fat widows and slim misses; one of the latter who appeared to be the goddess of the evening, was so fettered and laced as to cause me to apprehend that if she had the misfortue to fall down, we should have to lift her up, 'right-on-end,' like an oak log, not being bendable—besides these, there was a supply of demi men, some of them amused me not a little with their tricks. But there was a certain wowan whose splendid appearance attracted much attention—her gorgeous dress raised the yankee so much within me, that I asked her name. It was—no matter what; the wife or daughter of one of those standing recorded on an auditor's book, as a large defaulter, for more than three years. On this, not very gallantly, perhaps, instead of doing homage to the charms of the lady, I began to count the part that had been taken from my pocket to fit her out, and I supposed that it amounts to as much as would give a meal's victuals to as worthy a person as she; for the cost of her ornaments was trumpeted in my ear by one that stood near me, as if he had been informed of them for that purpose. On retiring, which I pretty soon did, the thought occurred of suggesting to the president, that a copy of every auditor's list bound up in WOLF's skin, should be nailed to the door post of the grand entrance of the drawing room, with instructions to the servants to admit no man, or his family, whose name was to be found therein, not that I would be rude to the ladies—but according to my notion of things, the wives and daughters of such persons would be much better engaged at home darning stockings than in parading before the public, insulting even the chief magistrate of the nation with an exhibition of their spoliations on the people. I mentioned this idea to a member of congress and he laughed heartily at it—but said, if all such were excluded from the drawing room, it would lose much of its brilliancy—and in this I was forced to agree with him. So not being encouraged in my old fashioned notions of decency, I gave up the project as hopeless—until it shall become fashionable for people to strive to pay their debts by industry and economy. MATRIMONY.

A curious circumstance lately occurred on the subject of this holy state. A couple engaged themselves to be married, the day was fixed; the company invited, the ring, the parson, the cake, and all the other occasional comforts was prepared; the bride and bridegroom, dressed and perfumed, were seated near the fire billing and cooing, every thing was ready; when lo! and behold, just before the parson said these ominous words "love, honour, and obey," the fickle bridegroom changed his mind, and refused to marry. In vain were the prayers of entreaties of friends urged; in vain the tears and anger of the bride exhibited; the gay Lothario was inexhorable. Here sat the bride overwhelmed with grief, there the iced plumb cake and cordial untouched, while reason and argument were thrown away upon the obstinate lover. At length the friends of the bride became enraged, and at two o'clock in the morning, were about beating the bridegroom into a compliance, with his engagements, when he made his escape & the next morning swore the peace against those guestswho had attempted to thump him into matrimony, when these facts leaked out, and the parties were bound over.

GOSHEN, (N. Y.) Jan. 7.

Fatal effects of Intemperance.—On New-Year day, a man by the name of Lewis Lucky, of the town of Warwick, drank so much liquor as to cause his death He had been drinking considerable through the day, when, on drinking down at one time, nearly a half pint of whiskey, he fell, and died shortly after, an awful death indeed! and a solemn warning to those who venture to indulge themselves in this destructive vice.

In consequence of its being reported that the members of Congress from the state of Pennsylvania had held a meeting for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the Presidency, the delegation has, through the National Intelligencer, disavowed the imputed meeting. Phil. Gaz.

REPUTATION.

Good name, in man and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.—Othello.

$20 REWARD.
RAN away on the 20th of last month from the subscriber, living on Braddock's field, near Pittsburgh, a negro boy, named about 19 years of age, five feet six or seven inches in height. The clothing he took with him, was a roundabout, jacket, and trowsers, of blue striped cotton, a pair of tow-linen trowsers, a white vest and two tow shirts, a wool hat somewhat less than half worn. He has a scar on the top of his head, occasioned by the fall of a brick from a scaffold when a child, which yet continues tender and causes pain when pressed, he is fond of whiskey and will get drunk, at which time he has a stupid look, he effects to be a rigid methodist, and is fond of singing hymns, which he frequently practises. I will give the above reward and all reasonable charges if brought home, or twenty dollars for securing him in any jail in the U. States, so that I can get him again. He went away in company with a yellow man named DICK, who sometimes calls himself Henry Dickson, the property of J & H. Wallace, who will give a reasonable reward for his apprehension.
JEFFERSON

LITERATURE.

How happy are those whose cultivated mind can, at all times, draw resources from themselves! to such solitude is never irksome, but entertainment charms with double zest
——For them, the spring
Distills her dews, and from the silken gem
Its leaf-bud leaves unfold; for them, the year
Of Autumn tinges every fertile breast
With blooming gold, and blushes like the morn.
Each passing hour sheds tribute from its wings,
And still new beauties meet their lonely eyes.

REPUTATION.

Good name, in man and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.—Othello.

Dupont's Powder.

FOR SALE A CONSTANT SUPPLY OF DUPONT'S
GUN-POWDER.

The character of this Powder being so generally known, it requires no further recommendation.

Attempts being made to impose inferior Powder on the public, for that of Dupont's, and in some instances the kegs are branded with their names, but as we are commissioned to make sales for the Western country, there will be no danger of imposition.

$20 REWARD.

RAN away on the 20th of last month from the subscriber, living on Braddock's field, near Pittsburgh, a negro boy, named about 19 years of age, five feet six or seven inches in height. The clothing he took with him, was a roundabout, jacket, and trowsers, of blue striped cotton, a pair of tow-linen trowsers, a white vest and two tow shirts, a wool hat somewhat less than half worn. He has a scar on the top of his head, occasioned by the fall of a brick from a scaffold when a child, which yet continues tender and causes pain when pressed, he is fond of whiskey and will get drunk, at which time he has a stupid look, he effects to be a rigid methodist, and is fond of singing hymns, which he frequently practises. I will give the above reward and all reasonable charges if brought home, or twenty dollars for securing him in any jail in the U. States, so that I can get him again. He went away in company with a yellow man named DICK, who sometimes calls himself Henry Dickson, the property of J. & H. Wallace, who will give a reasonable reward for his apprehension.

JEFFERSON;

LITERATURE.

How happy are those whose cultivated minds can, at all times, draw resources from themselves! to such solitude is never irksome, nor amusement charms with double zest.

——For them, the spring
Distills her dews, and from the silken gem
Its lucid leaves unfold; for them, the hand
Of Autumn tinges every fertile brook
With blooming gold, and blushes like the morn.
Each passing hour sheds a tribute from its wing,
And still new beauties meet their lonely walk.
